DAILY HERALD.

WEDNESDAY MORNING, NOVEMBER 29. THE attention of our country exchanges is sitled to an exchange. To those who have not we offer our daily in exchange for one year upon their inserting this Prospectus three times and calling attention to it editorially.

Contracting the Currency. This Government has ceased to be the plain, cheap, simple, equal Government it once was, and has become a monster bank, administered, It seems to us, with as much abuse, fraud and deception as ever was the old Philadelphia monster of NICK BIDDLE. This Government will never be the just and equitable one it once was, only through a terrible revolution. put down the price of gold? The Secretary steps forward into the market and offers the treasury contents at a given price. Does he want to put it up, he hords. Those in his secret confidence profit both ways, and the uninitiated are ruined. Does he want to create a fictitious currency to be traded on, he issues gold certificates, and can do so, whether there is really any gold deposited or not. Does he want to expand the currency, and put up prices to enable his favorites to sell on high prices, he issues greenbacks. Does he want to contract, to enable his favorites to buy at low prices, he contracts he retains in the Treasury the greenbacks. But the topic upon which we propose to say a accomplish. word, at this time, is the permanent, not temporary contraction of the currency, with a view to return to a specie basis, or currency.

The Secretary of the Treasury announced in his Fort Wayne speech that he proposed to reduce the volume of currency; and the simple utterance of this indefinite idea by the money king of this nation, who holds the fate of all in his hands, gave a shock to trade and business of a very decided character. Everybody trembled with fear and staggered on in uncer-

But the question naturally arises, how is the Secretary to permanently curtail the circulawill also be ruined. But how can the Secretary do it? He can not do it by reducing the amount of our specie, because we have got no duce the issues of the United States free banks without an arrangement with them, because he can not now compel them, as we are aware, without their consent, to take in their paper, only by redeeming it in greenbacks, which would throw out as much paper as was taken in. But the Secretary can reduce circulating paper, greenbacks, by inducing the holders to take for them long bonds, which do not circulate; but can be find purchasers for them, or such terms, in sufficient numbers, as to effect seriously the currency? We doubt it. Further, a large amount of Government bonds already out are soon to fall due, and are to be paid in greenbacks. If the holders of these securities will not accept long bonds for them, then a further issue of greenback currency must be issued in their payment.

Another mode of reducing the currency is that is for the Secretary of the Treasury to destroy the greenbacks as he takes them in so that they shall not be reissued; but this he can not do till the income of the Government exceed its out-goes; until its revenues exceed he must pass it right over to the creditors with the other, and out it goes again into circulation. But, if the Government collectors could only required two millions, then there would

The way, then, to reduce the currency is to increase the taxes so that the Government shall to destroy the surplus. But the Government can not increase the taxes. The people will not long endure the present rates. We do not have much faith in the idea that the Government can raise, by taxation, enough to pay the expenses of the Government and the interest on the public debt. We admit, our financial condition is continually befogged by deception, so that the public are kept in continual ignorance of the truth. But we are safe, we think, in saying that the interest on the public debt and pensions will require two hundred millions a year, and that the expenses of the Government will be two hundred millions more; that is four hundred millions in all. Now, does anybody believe the Government can collect, annually, enough over four hundred millions a year to greatly lessen the volume of currency? The only way, then, of reducing the currency, is by funding, that is, inducing the Government creditors to take long bonds, instead of greenbacks in payment. Will they do it? That must depend on the two questions of whether there is surplus capital to be put into them, and whether the credit of the Government is like to continue good enough to invite it.

> A Personal Collision at Richmond, Indiana. Yesterday after oon, about five o'clock, while Hon. Geo. W. Meredith then ceeded to apply it to Mr. Julian, continuing cause of the difficulty we have not learned. The remote cause is, we suppose, political jealousy.
